Do not mix and apply the same day, but let it senson or ripen as masons do. Better still, where but a bushel or so is needed, go to some place where building is going on, or to a mason who keeps it ready-made, and obtain a bet-

Soldering Metal and Glass. An invention of value is that by means of which metal and glass can be soldered. The process is simple, and not specially costly. It consists in plating glass with platinum. The glass is coated with a mixture of essential oil of chamontile and platina. Heat dissipates the volatile elements and leaves a film of piatinum strongly adhering to the glass. Electroplating this with copper gives the necessary surface for soldering, an operation that is easily performed. In the decoration of glass, fine trellis work or tracery of copper may be soldered to the glass and plated with gold, salver or nickel. The inve
